Alexa J. Lamm & Pei-wen Huang<sup>1</sup>

After learning about the CERP, it is important to acknowledge members of the general public's thoughts. Some questions you can ask to encourage a positive conversation are:

1. What do you think about water quality in Florida?
2. Do you think water quality is getting worse or getting better? Why?
3. Have you experienced any water quality issues? What was the issue(s)?
4. Why do you think the CERP is important to protect water resources?
5. How can the CERP improve water quality in Florida?
6. Do you take care of your home landscape/lawn? If so, how will the CERP impact your landscaping care?
7. What do you believe are the largest issues facing you, as you strive to comply with the CERP as a homeowner who needs to take care of your landscape/lawn?
8. If you have a home landscape to take care of, how do you plan to deal with the impacts the CERP has or will have on your landscaping care?
